

“We have the greatest opportunity, perhaps in history, to transform the way we lead—to create a workplace where producing results doesn’t compromise people’s health and well-being.”

Susan Fowler, Why Motivating People Doesn’t Work... and What Does

RETHINKING LEADERSHIP: MASTERING MOTIVATION WITH OTHERS™

People cite three reasons for resigning and quiet quitting, according to a global study: the lack of autonomy and flexibility, to escape a toxic culture and meaningless work, and a desire for growth and learning opportunities.¹

Isn’t it fascinating that what people long for perfectly aligns with motivation science? For people to experience optimal motivation and thrive at work, they need to fulfill their psychological needs for choice, connection, and competence.

The good news is that Mastering Motivation with Others presents three scientifically proven capacities to promote people’s psychological needs and the optimal motivation that leads to results and flourishing.

LEADERSHIP CAPACITIES THAT PROMOTE OPTIMAL MOTIVATION IN OTHERS

ENCOURAGE CHOICE (Autonomy)

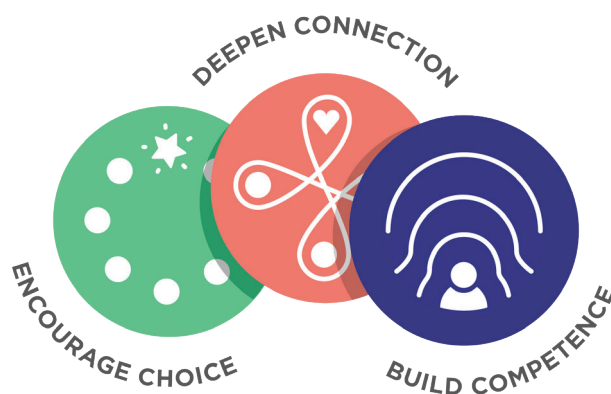

Help people realise that they always have choices, have options within boundaries, and are the source of their actions.

DEEPEN CONNECTION (Relatedness)

Help people feel a sense of belonging and genuine connection to others without concerns about ulterior motives, align goals and actions to meaningful values and a sense of purpose, and contribute to something greater than themselves.

BUILD COMPETENCE

Help people feel effective at managing everyday situations, demonstrate skill over time, and experience growth and learning.
